

Supporting Information to ‘High-temperature strength behavior of tantalum diboride to 2000°C’

Oleg Vasylykiv (a)[†] and Dmytro Demirskyi (b)

(a) National Institute for Materials Science, 1-2-1 Sengen, Tsukuba, Ibaraki 305-0047, Japan

(b) WPI-Advanced Institute for Materials Research (WPI-AIMR), Tohoku University, 2-1-1 Katahira, Aoba-ku, Sendai, 980-8577, Japan

<https://doi.org/10.1111/jace.19307>

Here is the alternative version for the Figure 1 which indicates the increase in strength of tantalum diboride ceramic with increasing of loading rate during the flexural test experiments.

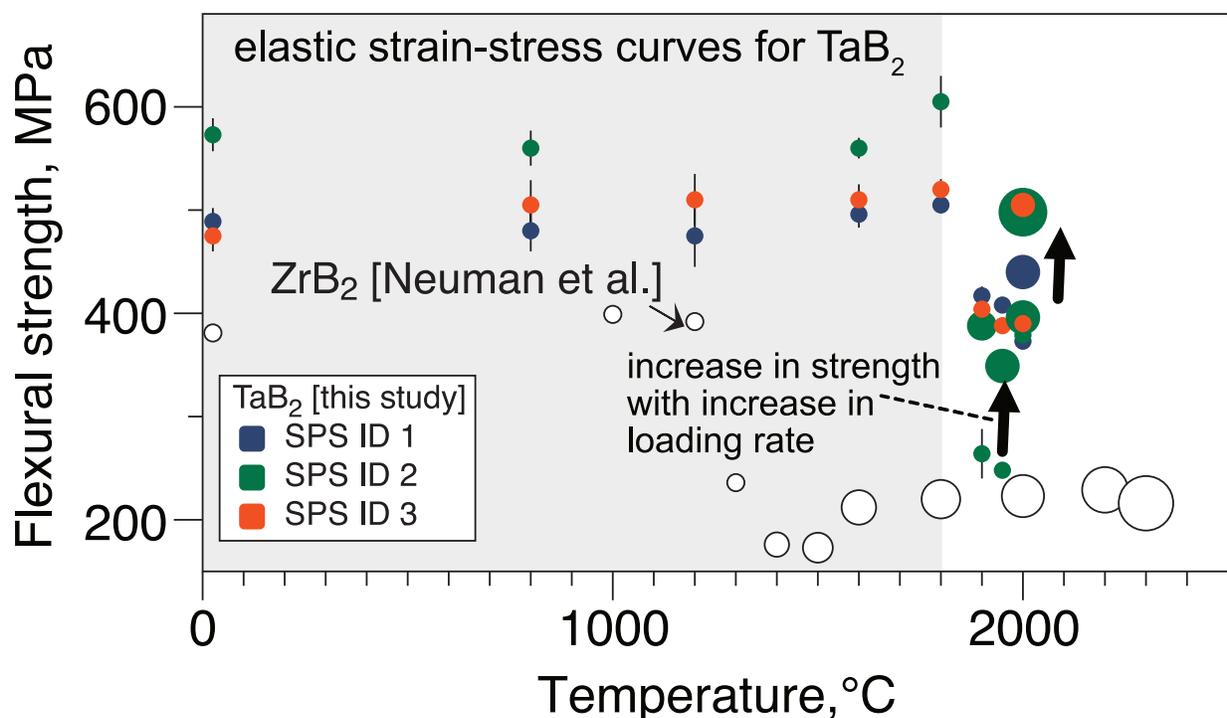

Figure S1. Temperature dependence of the flexural strength of TaB₂ and ZrB₂ [9].

The loading rate utilized during the flexural test is indicated by a specific color and symbol size.

[†] Author to whom correspondence should be addressed, Oleg Vasylykiv oleg.vasylykiv@nims.go.jp

*Oleg Vasylykiv and Dmytro Demirskyi contributed equally to this study.